NCBDS FACULTY AWARD NOMINATION GUIDELINES

The Award

The NCBDS Faculty Award recognizes demonstrated excellence in teaching, pedagogy, curriculum development, and/or innovative project development within the formative years of design students' education. Teaching beginning design requires special knowledge, patience, ingenuity, and enthusiasm. Nominations are requested for faculty who demonstrate sustained commitment and high level of achievement in beginning design education. The faculty member who receives the award will be recognized during the conference.

Award Criteria

The NCBDS sponsors this annual award to recognize sustained commitment and high level of achievement in beginning design education. Nominations should relate to work in beginning design specifically and convey how faculty have explored new ground and inspired student engagement during the early stages of students' education.

Eligibility

Nominated faculty must teach in an accredited university with a degree program in architecture, landscape architecture, interior architecture, industrial design, graphic design, fashion design, fine arts, urban planning, urban design, ecological design, or other design-related field. Full-time, part-time, and faculty with adjunct or other non-tenure related appointments are eligible for the award. Any faculty member, administrator, or student may nominate a candidate for the NCBDS Faculty Award. A faculty member who has already won this award is not eligible for nomination.

Review

Nominations will be reviewed by at least three senior academics; selection will be based on scholarship, innovation, clarity, contribution, and impact on beginning design education.
